

Robert's Ramblings

A Call to Life

A once popular Christian apologist prior to his death was known for saying, "Jesus did not come into the world to make bad people good, but to make dead people alive." It is a powerful and true statement. Today is Pentecost Sunday, often referred to as the birthday of the church, when heaven opened up and the Spirit came down. We remember and celebrate the coming of the Holy Spirit upon the followers of Jesus. Today however, we are going to look at a slightly different passage from John's gospel. Before the rushing wind... before the tongues of fire...before Peter preached, Jesus stood and cried out "If anyone thirsts, let him come to Me and drink." It is an invitation that still stands today.

The world offers the temporary which leaves people empty, Jesus offers to fill us to overflow. The world produces exhaustion while the spirit produces life. "If anyone thirsts...", not are we religious, or talented, or have an impressive resume – are you thirsty? People thirst for many things: meaning, knowledge, intimacy, notoriety, power. Often there is a longing in us that we have tried to fill with everything except for the one source that truly can. One of the elements of the Christian faith that makes it special is that Christianity is not merely the imitation of Jesus, it is participation with Jesus in the Kingdom work of God the father through the Holy Spirit. The Spirit changes people. It took the followers of Jesus huddled in an upper room and made them courageous witnesses. It can do the same for us today.

Part of being human is thirsting for something more than we have, thirsty to be someone more than we are now. Despite time after time, story after story, testimony after testimony from others who unsuccessfully sought to quench that thirst by earthy means, we often still choose to learn the lesson for ourselves the hard way. Many in our culture have been led to believe that we can't speak to the truth of something unless we have done it, or been there, or have had that, or are that – whatever "it" may be. That is simply not the case. In a world that struggles with the concept of truth, the constant of the one who was and is the way, the truth, and the life never changes. Christ loves us enough to take us as we are – right where we are, and loves us enough not to leave us there.
